A Trash Collector’s Work is Never Done

Brian Kane was a trash collector in Denver, Colorado. Year after year, A _____ Brian rode on the back of a garbage truck through the streets of this city. At each stop, he would jog quickly to the back of buildings, then drag heavy trash cans to the truck. Brian never complained— even B _____ or cold wind turned his fingers into sticks of ice.

Brian saw these hardships C _____. His job was actually a training ground for his lifelong dream: to climb Mount Everest, the highest mountain in the world. On his thirtieth birthday, Brian took a three-month leave from his job and flew to Nepal. There he began the long, difficult journey up Mount Everest. Brian first climbed to a base camp. He stayed there for a couple of weeks D _____. Brian had also planned to bring three oxygen canisters with him to the summit, at 29,028 feet, it would be hard to survive without extra oxygen. Over the next two months, Brian climbed to 26,000 feet, to Camp Four— the last place to rest below the summit. But when Brian saw this camp, he gasped and fell to his knees.

"Trash!" he cried. Nearly a thousand empty oxygen canisters littered the camp area. Humans had turned this beautiful remote place into a giant trash heap. Nevertheless, E _____, Brian continued to follow his dream.

Two days later he stood proudly on the peak of Mt. Everest. He had reached the "roof of the world"! Two days after this great achievement, Brian stuffed a dozen empty oxygen canisters in his pack and headed down the mountain. He smiled to himself F _____ that the work of a trash collector is never done.

Universal Language

Isn't it strange that there is still no language that everyone on our planet understands? Many people say that English is the international language, yet there are many places you can go where English would not be understood. Even though we have sent people to the moon, invented computers and can travel anywhere on earth in a matter of hours, we still have not come up with a universal way to communicate with each other.

There is a legend that long ago there was only one language. The people at that time, being proud and ambitious, decided to build a tower that would reach up to the heavens. God was not pleased with this, however, and mixed up their language, in the process creating many languages, so they would not understand each other. As a result, they were not able to work together, and so the tower, known as the tower of Babel, was never completed. Inspired by this story, people have dreamed of recreating a single universal language ever since.

For many centuries, Latin was the language that educated people in Europe used as a common means of communication. It was the language of science and education. However, in the 17th century, the German philosopher Leibniz dreamed about constructing a language that could replace Latin. It would be able to mathematically express every thought possible and would therefore be better than any existing natural language. Unfortunately, the project was too ambitious and never completed, and even if it had, it probably would have been too abstract and difficult for people to learn.

Throughout history, there have been times when a particular language is widely used by many different people in addition to their own native languages as an international language. Lingua franca is the term used to describe such languages. Many people think this word refers to French, which was a lingua franca in Europe in the 19th century. In fact, the term refers to a language spoken around the eastern Mediterranean Sea as a language of trade and diplomacy from late medieval times until the Renaissance. It was mostly Italian but mixed with French, Spanish, Greek and even Arabic. In modern times, English enjoys the status of a lingua franca in many parts of the world.

The most successful attempt at creating a constructed language that could be used as a lingua franca has been Esperanto. It was created by Ludwik Zamenhof, a Polish medical doctor in the 19th century. Saddened by the many quarrels and arguments between the different ethnic groups living in Poland at the time, such as Russians, Poles, Tatars, Germans and others, he dreamed of creating a language that could be easily learned by everyone and be used as a neutral tool of communication by people from different ethnic and linguistic backgrounds.

Esperanto is still around today, but it has failed to become a universal language. One of the reasons is that it is not taught at school except as an experiment in Hungary and China, and so never really caught on. People still study it as a hobby and meet up with other enthusiasts of Esperanto, but the numbers of those who learn it cannot compete with the popularity of English. Although Esperanto failed to attract enough speakers to become a lingua franca people have never given up on the dream and continue to create new international languages such as Interlingua, Ido and others.

In the last sentence of the first paragraph the author implies that...

1. ...the ability to travel anywhere fast requires a universal language.
2. ...a universal language is needed for effective use of computers.
3. ...creating a universal language is harder than creating a computer.
4. ...computers should be used to create a universal language.

According to the legend, which of the following is NOT one of the reasons why God created many languages?

1. For the people not to be able to complete the tower.
2. For the people not to be able to understand each other.
3. To inspire the people to create a new universal language.
4. To punish the people for being too proud and ambitious.

Which word is closest in meaning to the word 'ambitious' in the third paragraph?

1. Proud.
2. Challenging.
3. Enthusiastic.
4. Impractical.

Which choice is closest in meaning to the phrase "English enjoys the status of a lingua franca" at the end of the fourth paragraph?

1. The English language has become a lingua franca.
2. English speakers enjoy the fact that English is a lingua franca.
3. English has been officially given the status of a lingua franca.
4. People all around the world enjoy learning English.

Which of the following statements is true?

1. Esperanto is now taught in school in Poland, Hungary and China.
2. Esperanto served as a lingua franca in the 19th century Poland.
3. Ludwik Zamenhof often quarreled with Russians, Tatars and Germans.
4. There were many ethnic groups living in the 19th century Poland.

Which of the following is NOT the reason why Esperanto has failed to become a universal language?

1. Esperanto is not an obligatory subject at schools.
2. Esperanto is a difficult language to learn.
3. There are not enough enthusiasts of Esperanto.
4. Its place has already been taken by English.

Which choice is closest in meaning to the phrase "never really caught on" in the last paragraph?

1. Was never taught in schools.
2. Was never fully developed.
3. Was never really popular.
4. Was never easy to learn.

Imagine that you are preparing a project with your friend. You have found some interesting material for the presentation and you want to read this text to your friend. You have 1.5 minutes to read the text silently, then be ready to read it out aloud. You will not have more than 1.5 minutes to read it.

...You don't see many birds in winter. Most have left your area. Those that stay are not as active. Activity uses energy that is needed to keep warm. The worst problems for birds in winter are getting enough heat and holding on to the heat once it is made. These are problems for all birds. But it is especially true for very small ones. They cannot find enough food. The weather stays so cold for so long that they cannot eat enough to keep alive. But birds have many ways of fighting the cold.

You shiver to keep warm. The heat that you make is made mostly in your muscles. The muscles make more heat when they are active. So one way of keeping warm is to move about, use your muscles. Another way is to shiver. When your body needs heat, the muscles tighten and loosen quickly. They become active. Just as you shiver to keep warm, so do birds.

Пояснение. Dear Simone,

Thank you for your message. Im sorry for not writing you for so long. I spent my time doing a school project.

Its great that youre planning to take a trip to a nature reserve. As for me, Ive never been to any nature reserve as they are rather far from the place I live in. However, I find observing nature very interesting because its a kind of relaxation. Also, I consider nature reserves to be very important as they help people understand admire the beauty of the world around us.

Anyway, Im glad to hear that youve started playing football. What is your new Recreation Center look like? What facilities does it have? Where is it located?

Looking forward to your answer.

Best wishes,

Kate

Пояснение. 38.1.Many people believe that doing sports is the best way of spending their free time. The aim of the project

I am currently working on is to find out reasons for doing sports in Zetland. As part of my project, I have found and analyzed some relevant data presented in the table.

According to the data, the people have quite a wide range of things to think of before going to the gym. It is clear that the vast majority of the respondents consider keeping fit to be the most significant reason, 41% of them have mentioned it. Moreover, coping with stress as well as spending time with friends are also quite popular answers with the interviewed (25% and 23% respectively); whereas, people rarely think about spending time outdoors and being trendy.

It is worth mentioning that according to the poll the opportunity to be healthy is ten times as important as to be fashion forward. It seems to me that people value their health more than entertainment.

One problem that can arise with doing sports is that some people need a company to go to the gym due to their shyness or laziness. One solution to this problem is to open clubs where like-minded people could cheer each other and thus assist.

In conclusion, I firmly believe that doing sports is very important nowadays. I think, it is the best way of spending their free time. (237 words)

38.2. Nowadays the elderly spend their free time differently particularly there is a variety of hobbies. The aim of the project I am currently working on is to find out leisure activities most popular among senior citizens in Zetland. As part of my project, I have found and analyzed some relevant data presented in the diagram.

According to the data, the senior generation in Zetland has quite a wide range of tastes when it comes to spend their time. It is clear, that the vast majority of the respondents enjoy watching TV as well as reading (39% and 34% respectively). Also, 16% of the interviewed senior citizens like spending time with their friends and family, whereas gardening and playing computer games appear to be the least popular pastimes.

It is worth mentioning that spending time at home with a book is four times as popular as planting flowers and vegetables in the garden. To my mind, not everyone has their own garden so that they enjoy reading more.

Statistics reveal one problem connected with taking up a leisure activity. Obviously, there are no active hobbies in the table. Thus, senior citizens in Zetland do not do sports, it is not easy to take up sports. One solution to this problem is to open special clubs for the elderly there they can do gymnastics or go walking. It is easier to do something new in a company.

In conclusion, I firmly believe that leisure activities play a significant role in the life of senior citizens. It helps the elderly spend their time with pleasure and feel their importance. (266 words)

Пояснение. Hey, Kate. You know what? I've just found two pictures suitable for our project "Helping the environment". Let me tell you a bit more about them.

They are relevant to our project because in both pictures there are people helping the environment. In the first photo there is a girl and a boy. They are planting trees. In the second picture there is a group of people in the meeting in the centre of a city. There are a few differences to illustrate our project better. Obviously, in the first picture there are some schoolchildren helping the environment by simple actions. Meanwhile the second picture features some members of an environmental organization, they are trying to help the nature by holding a rally.

In my opinion, the two ways of helping the environment have their advantages. For instance, simple actions like planting trees or collecting rubbish is very effective helping the local areas. Meanwhile, being a part of an organization will allow someone to take part in different interesting projects, like ecological conferences. Of course, the both ways of helping the environment have disadvantages too. As for helping the local area, it doesn't give the opportunity to develop one's skills like an organization does. At the same time, being a member of an organization requires much more time from a person, for example, there are lots of events which must be held.

As for me, I prefer doing simple actions to help the place where I live as I think only we ourselves can make this world better.

So, shall we use these photos in our project? Call me when you're ready to discuss if we can use them. Bye-bye.
