4.

Установите соответствие между текстами A–G и заголовками 1–8. Запишите свои ответы в таблицу. Используйте каждую цифру только один раз. В задании один заголовок лишний.

1. For information and urgent help.
2. World without buttons.
3. To monitor and treat the disease.
4. A built-in charger.
5. Key under your skin.
6. Big brother is watching you.
7. Disadvantages of tech.
8. Phone always on you.

A. Sure, we're virtually connected to our phones 24/7 now, but what if we could be literally plugged in to our phones? That's already starting to happen. Last year, for instance, artist Anthony Antonellis had a chip put in his arm that could store and transfer data to his handheld smartphone. And researchers are already experimenting with sensors that turn human bone into living speakers.

B. In the future patients will be able to use implantable technologies to diagnose and even treat diseases. Scientists in London are developing swallowable capsule-sized chip that will control fat levels in obese patients and generate genetic material that makes them feel "full". It has potential as an alternative to surgery to handle obesity. Also it can monitor blood-sugar levels for diabetics.

C. The U.S. military has programs to identify any person using face scanning device. Some people see it as a doubtless advantage: improved crime fighting, secure elections and never a lost child again. However, such technologies can hammer against social norms and raise privacy issues. And one day there might be a computer to see all, know all and control all.

D. One of the challenges for implantable tech is delivering power to devices which are inside human bodies. You can't plug them in as you do with your phone or computer. You can't easily take them out to replace a battery. A team in Cambridge is working on specific bio batteries that can generate power inside the body, transfer it wirelessly where needed, and then simply melt away.

E. Soon tattoos will not only make you look cool but will be able to perform useful tasks, like opening your car or entering smartphone codes with a fingerprint. Researchers have made an implantable skin fiber thinner than a human hair. Scientists are working on the chip that can be put inside a finger through a tattoo-like process, letting you unlock things or enter codes simply by pointing.

F. The British research team is developing pills with microprocessors in them that can text to hospitals directly from inside your body. The pills can share inside info to help doctors know if you are taking your medication properly and if it is having the desired effect. Moreover, in case of emergency, it can send a signal to the computer and the ambulance will come straight away.

G. Lately touchscreens are everywhere— from computers, phones, tablets to car systems and vending machines. Even doorbells now include touch screen controls. One has to wonder: are we moving to a world of only touchscreen devices? And the answer is probably yes. We are coming to an age where every flat or even curved surface could be made a touchscreen and we can operate from it.

Why I sent Oxford a rejection letter

A little over a month ago, I sent Oxford a rejection email that parodied the thousands that they send each year. Much to my surprise, it has become a bit of an Internet hit, and has provoked reactions of both horror and amusement.

In my letter I wrote: "I have now considered your establishment as a place to read Law (Jurisprudence). I very much regret to inform you that I will be withdrawing my application. I realize you may be disappointed by this decision, but you were in competition with many fantastic universities and following your interview, I am afraid you do not quite meet the standard of the universities I will be considering."

I sent the email after returning from my interview at Magdalen College, Oxford, to prove to a couple of my friends that Oxbridge did not need to be held in awe. One of them subsequently shared it on Facebook because he found it funny.

I certainly did not expect the email to spread as far as it has. Varying between offers of TV interviews and hundreds of enthusiastic Facebook messages, it has certainly been far-reaching. Many of my friends and undoubtedly many strangers were unable to comprehend that I sent such an email to this bastion of prestige and privilege. Why was I not afraid of damaging my future prospects as a lawyer? Didn't I think this might hurt my chances with other universities?

For me, such questions paint a picture of a very cynical society. I do not want to study law because I want to be rich, or wear an uncomfortable wig and cloak. Perhaps optimistically, I want to study law because I am interested in justice.

To me, withdrawing my application to an institution that is a symbol of unfairness in both our education and the legal system (which is so dominated by Oxbridge graduates) makes perfect sense, and I am reluctant to be part of a system so heavily dominated by such a narrow group of self-selecting elites.

So, why did I apply in the first place? If you're achieving high grades at A-level (or equivalent), you can feel quite a lot of pressure to "prove yourself by getting an Oxbridge offer. Coupled with the fact that I grew up on benefits in council estates throughout Bristol— not a type of heritage often associated with an Oxbridge interview— I decided to give it a try.

It was only at the interview that I started to question what exactly I was trying to prove. I was well aware that fantastic candidates are often turned down, and I did not believe that this was a true reflection of their academic potential.

Although I share concern that not going to Oxbridge gives you a "chip on your shoulder", I did not write to Oxford to avoid the risk of being labeled as an "Oxbridge reject": I already am one. Last year I made an (admittedly weak) application to Cambridge and was inevitably rejected post-interview.

A year ago, I was in awe of the beautiful buildings of Oxbridge, but today I am in awe of the sheer number of people who, like me, have managed to not take it so seriously. Ultimately, I am not harming Oxford by laughing at it, and it is an amazing feeling to realize that so many people are enjoying my email. Actually, I was amazed to know how many people of different ages bothered to read it and even to leave their comments about it in Facebook. I had fun reading some of them, too.

The email letter the author sent to Oxford was meant to be...

1. ...regretful.
2. ...desperate.
3. ...respectful.
4. ...mocking.

The letter caused so much response because people...

1. ...fully agreed with the message.
2. ...found the topic very interesting.
3. ...wanted to defend Oxbridge.
4. ...were outraged with the letter.

The author accuses society of cynicism because...

1. ...people seem to be more worried about reputations.
2. ...people supported Oxbridge.
3. ...lawyers do their job for high incomes.
4. ...universities are very selective.

Judging by paragraph 7, the author comes from a family which is...

1. ...aristocratic.
2. ...educated.
3. ...not very rich.
4. ...big.

The author believes that the selection to Oxbridge...

1. ...is unfair.
2. ...reveals candidates abilities.
3. ...needs improvement.
4. ...is hard to understand.

The expression "chip on your shoulder" in paragraph 9 means...

1. ...reflection of ones potential.
2. ...feelings of unfair treatment.
3. ...below-average performance.
4. ...record of achievements.

"It" in "have managed to not take it so seriously" in the last paragraph refers to...

1. ...Oxford.
2. ...Oxbridge rejection.
3. ...university studies.
4. ...university interview.

Imagine that you are preparing a project with your friend. You have found some interesting material for the presentation and you want to read this text to your friend. You have 1.5 minutes to read the text silently, then be ready to read it out aloud. You will not have more than 1.5 minutes to read it.

The mystery of why trees don't stop growing is still unsolved. Human beings usually stop growing sometime during their teens. Many animals reach full growth within a year. Others are fully grown in just a few years. Birds and insects also stop growing at a certain age. But trees keep growing as long as they live. Trees live, grow, and reproduce themselves by an amazing process. The thousands of leaves put forth by the tree breathe for it and manufacture its food. Its root system gathers minerals and vast quantities of water. To carry this water to the leaves, the tree is equipped with an intricate circulation system that extends upward from the millions of root hairs through the trunk and branches. The trunk holds the leaves up to the sunlight, sends them water from the roots, and gets food back from them. Then seeds are borne in flowers or cones.

Пояснение. Dear Thomas,

Thanks for your message. Im sorry I couldnt answer you earlier, I had to prepare for an exam.

You must have had an awesome trip. Ive climbed an inactive volcano, but it is probably nothing compared to walking on warm lava. I am glad to know you liked this experience. The last natural phenomenon to impress me a lot was the polar day I experienced last summer while visiting the Solovetsky islands. Funny, but mostly it felt sleepy, since I was completely knocked off my sleeping routine by continious daylight within 4 days.

Horse riding must be an awesome sport. Is it difficult to control the horse? How high can it jump? How fast can you go on horseback?

Im sorry, but I have to leave now, its time for me to walk my dog.

Looking forward to hearing from you.

Best wishes,

Kirill

Пояснение. 38.1. There is a public belief that if you choose a job you love, you will never have to work a single day in your life. While doing a project on what field children want to work in, I have found a table containing some relevant data that I am going to comment on.

According to the data, the children have quite a wide range of tastes when it comes to future job. It is clear that 33% of the respondents choose doctor to be their dream job. Being an artist or a designer ranks second in popularity with 31% of the surveyed children. Interestingly, 15% of the respondents don't mind earning their living as police officer or security guard.

The statistics analysis shows that IT industry, chosen by 12% of the respondents, is by 3% less popular than working in a police office. However, their tastes may change due to an increasing popularity of the computers among younger generation.

Although children like playing different professional roles, usually they do not know what qualities and knowledge they will really need to make their dream come true. Thus, they sometimes make wrong choices and this seems to be a problem. To solve the problem, it is necessary to organize special courses in order to children can visit work places and understand what people really do there and what skills they need.

In conclusion, I firmly believe that having a dream job is very important for children. Their future career will depend on their desire, determination and perseverance. (255 words)

38.2. Many people believe that fast developing technologies become an essential part of everyday life particularly there is a variety of them. The aim of the project I am working on is to find out what fields robots are used in nowadays. As part of my project, I have found and analyzed some relevant data presented in the diagram.

According to the data, there is quite a wide range of spheres where robots are used and they are rather different. It is clear that the majority of the respondents appreciate automation and robotics in factories and plants, 70% of the interviewed have said about it. However, using robots in medicine as well as in household has also found supporters, so that 16% of the respondents have chosen each of these two categories. Besides, a small number of the respondents consider security, science, transport and vehicles to be promising areas for robotics development.

It is worth mentioning that robots helping about the house are more popular than self-driving cars. Obviously, automatic household appliances are wide spread nowadays and yet people are still dreaming about robotized vehicles.

One problem that can arise with robots is that people do not know what to do if something goes wrong. New technologies are based on very specific knowledge and instructions are usually written so that nobody can understand it. One solution to this problem is to create special applications with video instruction.

In conclusion, I firmly believe that robots play a significant role in human life. I think people can use them wisely in different spheres. (260 words)

Пояснение. Hey, Kate. You know that? I've just found two pictures suitable for our project "Work throughout the life". Let me tell you a bit more about them.

They are relevant to our project because in both pictures there are people working hard. In the first photo there is a girl doing her homework. She is at home. The exercise she is doing right now seems to be challenging because the girl looks confused. In the second photo there is a man in the office. He's doing his work. It should be difficult too, because he also looks puzzled. Obviously, these pictures are different in the kind of work people are doing. It seems to me that the little girl is doing her homework, and the man is managing his duties at work. They are also working in different settings— the girl is working at home, while the man is in the office.

In my opinion, completing schoolwork and working for an employer have their advantages. For instance, completing their school homework helps schoolchildren be well-educated, while working in an office, for example, is much more profitable. Of course, the types of working have disadvantages too. As for schoolchildren, they can feel in vain as no clear reward is given for doing their homework. However, working for an employer usually doesn't lead to personal development.

As for me I prefer doing homework to receive new knowledge and become more and more educated. And after the graduation I'll start working like the rest of the people.

So, shall we use these photos in our project? Call me when you're ready to discuss if we can use them. Bye-bye.
